Nose: Light, with a tingling sensation. The top notes are sweet and maritime, with hints of molasses and granulated sugar, combined with dry algae, grains of salt and iodine. Then a sweet fruit candy aroma prevails, with a smoky base and traces of braised meat. A drop of water weakens the massive impression a little, brings out the maritime character and reduces the sweet notes, while light smoke is noticeable.

Taste: The texture is soft and mild, the taste is immense: salty and especially slightly sweet, until the peppery sharpness typical of Talisker takes its place. Will be much drier. Water rounds off the impression, softens the strongly sweet notes and brings out the pepper more strongly. However, the overall impression remains similar.

Finish: Long, peppery finish with sweet and smoky end notes and the unmistakable Talisker chili kick when swallowed. With water it becomes more balanced, but remains similar, with a trace of smoke on the tongue.
